But I would like to pause for a moment to comment on a couple of things I've noticed about your post. First, you complain about the long intervals between comments. I've never had a problem posting comments here. It's just been slow. I've noticed a number of other people who also have issue with the time between comments. Auxilium: great job! We had a good response from our donors, and we're excited for our first show. We've got a great show planned for September, featuring live music, comedy and readings. We would love your support at this crucial stage. News: I can't agree with you more! For some reason, the English Wikipedia has a higher standard of sources for getting a new article going. I've tried on a number of occasions to create articles, and haven't been able to get anywhere. Maybe that's just because Wikipedia is too academic? Or perhaps the quality of sources for Wikipedia is too high and no one reads the articles? Whatever the case, this is definitely true for the first place I went to get advice about creating a new article, Wikipedia: Creation. What do you think? The article currently has over of sources and it's been there for a long time. Applying a /browserfilter/ to my favourite wiki to avoid this sort of thing. Who are the three best people in the history of human civilization? Determinants of sperm quality and fertilization success in farm and zoo-derived sperm donors. Sperm banking is increasingly performed using sperm from zoo- and farm-derived donors (sperm donors). Sperm quality and fertilization ability are critical for sperm bank success. Research on the farm- and zoo-derived donor population is extremely limited; thus, there is no definitive information as to whether or not sperm donor breed or origin affects the gamete quality (sperm quality and fertilization ability). The aim of the study was to evaluate the influence of the donor's breed and origin on sperm quality and fertilization ability. Sperm donors (n = 35) were classified as wild boar (WB), farm-derived domestic boar (DB), farm-derived domestic cross-breed (DBX), and farm-derived domestic pure-breed (DPB). The parameters analyzed

USA-ASME Journal of Engineering Mechanics..Language proficiency of service providers in obstetric mental health. The language proficiency of service providers in obstetric mental health is critical to the provision of high-quality care and to increase patient care outcomes. In an effort to maximize the quality of care, including patient-provider communication, the burden of professional language skills in the health care field is being re-examined. The purpose of this exploratory study was to determine the language proficiency of service providers working in obstetric mental health and to establish if those who practice obstetric mental health are included. The sample consisted of 77% mental health professionals including nurses, social workers, psychologists, registered nurses, psychologists, and occupational therapy assistants. The most common languages of spoken communication were English and Spanish. Of the language experts, only 15% identified as English or Spanish native speakers. Because of the shortage of professional staffing, both English and Spanish speakers in obstetric mental health should be considered for all nurses and other health professionals providing direct patient care and/or providing communication between patients and providers. The Mizzou is back, and the Tigers are back as well. Sporting a streak of 13 straight wins, the Tigers have retaken first place in the SEC East after a week of upsets in the conference. Just two short weeks ago, Missouri was sitting in the bottom of the SEC West and in the national rankings following a loss to South Carolina

State, with first place sitting in the lap of Georgia. However, an offense that was struggling to score points quickly gained some momentum when the Tigers traveled down to Columbia to face the one-loss Bulldogs. The Tigers dominated the second half, outscoring the Gamecocks 52-13 to come away with the win. Now, just two weeks later, the Tigers are back on top of the division and the national rankings after a dominating win over Alabama. In the process, the Tigers moved to 14-0 1cb139a0ed
